About our school

Provident Charter School in Pittsburgh, PA is a publicly funded school designed to address the needs of students with language-based learning differences such as dyslexia. Teaching at PCS

Multi-sensory instruction is at the core of academics at PCS. Each teacher is the lead instructor for no more than 6 students per class, providing a true 6:1 student-teacher ratio. Students are assessed and grouped by ability level so that teachers work within a tight scope of ability and can tailor instruction appropriately. Teachers are departmentalized and will loop with students for 2 years in order to minimize transitions and retain relationships. We are currently seeking a substitute teacher who is interested in approaching learning with creativity and who will seek out and leverage opportunities for students to learn in both traditional and non-traditional ways.
